The British Crisis

From what Prime Minister Attlee has said in London and from what U.S. Secretary of State Marshall has said in Washington, three important facts may be added:

1. That there will be no new direct American loan to Britain in advance of the Marshall Plan.
2. That Britain will be allowed to repudiate part of the agreement of the 1946 loan, in buying food and some other supplies, to the colonies and dominions, regardless of price, in order to save dollars.
3. That the United States is going to take over the major cost of operating the British zone in Germany, probably accepting blocked British sterling in payment for the money advances in Germany.

On top of these immediate facts there seems to be a certainty that a new Anglo-American debt conference will be held shortly.

Only one point appears to be in dispute. Secretary Marshall has refused to give the power to go ahead and grant the British requests without asking Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury, on the contrary, insists that Congress will have to approve the changes asked by Britain.

As far as the alteration in the loan agreement is concerned, the consent of the Congress is not of much importance. If the British have to resume buying on an imperial preference basis to keep from starving, neither the State Department nor Congress can do much about it.

The chief criticism that is heard of Mr. Attlee's plan is in regard to the emphasis on reduced consumption in Britain and his apparent timidity with regard to measures to enforce increased production.

For instance, he has not ventured to propose a return to the six-day working week—only a half hour to the coal miners' day and a notably vague recommendation for longer hours in other vital industries.

Indeed, the increases in production for which Mr. Attlee held out hope seem to be small and remote compared to Britain's critical need.

Only one per cent essential increase in food production depends upon the securing of 100,000 new farm workers. Mr. Attlee does not suggest where they are to be found.

It is obvious, too, that the coal industry, under present circumstances, cannot begin to meet the industrial and domestic needs. Here again, Mr. Attlee has no definite remedy.

The labor affiliations of the Attlee government appear to be a liability rather than an asset in the present production crisis.

Canada Grows Tobacco

Few Canadians think of tobacco as a crop native to this country and the announcement by Dr. Norman Macrae, of the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, that 99 per cent of all tobacco used in Canada is grown in the Dominion comes as something of a surprise.

Not only does Canada produce practically all the leaf required here, but a flourishing export trade has been built up and British Columbia, world famous for the quality of their products, are eager to get more from us.

Even cigar leaf, the most fastidiously selected part of tobacco, is produced in Canada in quantity.

The 1946 crop of Canadian tobacco was 143,584,993 pounds and was valued at almost fifty million dollars. There has been a steady increase in production since 1926 and as late as 1929 some 86 per cent of the leaf used in Canada was imported.

This industry has not only established a new crop and new work for Canadians, but has provided a new market that has hitherto regarded as worthless land.

Farm Loan Figures

Last year was the first full year during which the federal Farm Improvement Loans Act was in operation. During the year 13,093 farmers obtained loans totaling nearly $10,000,000.

Of this amount $7,486,347 went for the purchase of farm equipment and trucks. Practically all credit purchases of farm machinery, it is said, are now financed through Improvement Act loans or regular bank loans. Manufacturers and dealers no longer "carry" farm paper, as they used to do.

Last year 1,006 farmers secured loans with which to clear and break about 50,000 acres of new land, most of it in the western provinces. There were 303 loans for the purchase of land and breeding stock, totaling $100,937.

Construction and improvement of farm buildings did not figure largely in the year's operations, supposedly because material and labor conditions were unfavorable. Loans for this purpose are expected to increase rapidly once these conditions become more encouraging.

Loans under the Act are obtained from the chartered banks, the Dominion guaranteeing the banks against loss. The interest rate is 5 per cent per year, and the loan-term may run up to ten years. It is significant that up to the end of last year, loans had been made to a total amount of $13,262,307, and that of this amount $5,181,161 had been repaid.

Over a period of less than two years, this repayment of 39 per cent of the money loaned is a remarkable showing. While loans had been made in every province, at that date no bank had called on the government to pay under the liability clause.

That the Improvement Loans are meeting a nation-wide need is obvious. That those who obtain loans are paying up promptly is equally apparent. The taxpayer will see no need to worry about the risk of public credit involved, while the farmers across the Dominion have been helped to get equipment and better the living conditions of their families.

Religion and the Home

Speaking in Buffalo before the third world convention of the Churches of Christ, Mrs. Clarence H. Hamilton, professor of the philosophy of religion at Oberlin College, said this:

"It is difficult to teach a child about God when the relationships are not right in his home."

This statement touches upon a fact which may be the essence of the decline in religious practice.

For what can a child know about love, which is the life of religion, when no love is apparent in his home? How can a child be made to understand the Fatherhood of God when his own father is placed in a contentious and quarrelsome light in the family relationships?

It can almost be stated as a fundamental fact that the decline in religious observance is not due to the failure of churches but to the failure of homes.

Due consideration of that truth reveals the tremendous responsibility that devolves upon parents in the matter of maintaining the proper atmosphere in the home.

Double it is not psychologically sound to interpose the basic need for self-expression or whatever other helps parents to war with each other and even abandon their homes. But they assume a most solemn responsibility when their indulgence in practices that break up the home may result in the destruction of a child's belief in God.

Foreseeing in the power vacuum which the war would leave in Europe an open invitation to expansionism, he called for a council of Europe only to have his words fall on deaf ears. Now, perhaps too late, we are realizing through the Marshall proposals what Mr. Churchill advocated in 1943.

The "reactionary" who, in offering France federation with the British Commonwealth made the most radical move of the war, was moved by vulgar American mobs when he called for the utmost unity between Britain and America to restore the crumbling balance of power until, through his utter strength and will, power politics could be eliminated in a sufficiently strong world security system.

It seems a rule for success in politics: never be right and not look like it. Mr. Churchill was right in 1937, but it took the Germans at the Channel to prove it.

Veteran CNR Mail Clerk Retires

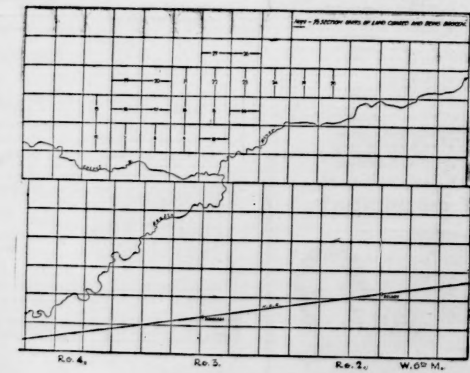

By James Algeo

With the happy thought that he will be home for Christmas this year, for the first time in five years, and commenting that he will never write another letter, Percy R. Poole, 1022 122nd street, a railway mail clerk, on the 35th birthday of his son, went on the retiring list Friday morning, when he completed his final run, after 35 years of faithful service with the post office.

On the same route for the last 25 years, it is believed he holds a record as being the only clerk to be on one run for such a period. "My immediate plans are to buy a fishing rod, and go fishing," one of his friends advised me that I should buy a farm, and keep a few cows and chickens, but "I have no intention of buying any work," he said.

With statutory holidays having little meaning to a railway postal clerk, who may be called to protect a train at any time, Mr. Poole is looking forward to spending his first Christmas at home. A presentation to the popular mail clerk will be made at a later date. Chinese historical records say that alikorms were reared as early as 2000 B.C.

Hit, Run Victim
In Hospital

Victims of a hit and run driver about 1 a.m. Saturday, Mrs. Ethel Ferguson, of Ardway's Grocery store, 114 avenue and 95 street, was rushed to the Royal Alexandra hospital by Paul's ambulance, where it was found she suffered two broken legs.

Two other persons also were injured in traffic accidents on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, while police also received a report of another motorist striking a safety zone.

Mrs. Ferguson told police she had just got out of a car on the west side of 95 street and proceeded to cross the roadway. She said she saw a car travelling north on the street and it was about two blocks away. She said the next thing she knew the car was upon her, knocked her down and continued on its way.

Don Shep, 9715 95 street, told police that Mrs. Ferguson had just left his car and was crossing the street when he saw her struck. He said the hit and run vehicle was travelling about 35 miles per hour. He told police he did not chase after the auto and thought he travelled at a speed in excess of 60 miles per hour he could not overtake the fleeing auto. He finally lost track of it at 118 avenue and 82 street.

Saturday morning police were investigating and were hoping to make an arrest sometime during the day.

In an accident between a truck and a tricycle, three-year old Tommy Pappas, 10888 102 street, suffered a cracked bone in the lower part of his left leg about 1.45 p.m.

Driver of the truck, M. Orzech, 9631 107 avenue, said he was backing up a truck to the loading platform at the rear of the Northern Alberta Dairy Pool, 105 avenue and 102 street, when he heard yell.

Head and right arm were injured by R. H. Miller, 10501 151 street, when his auto was struck by a CPR locomotive about 2:25 a.m. Saturday at the railway crossing between 82 avenue and 102 street.

A Calgary man, Clifford McDonald, said he was driving his vehicle into one of the new city streets when he was struck by a CPR locomotive about 2:25 a.m. Saturday at the railway crossing between 82 avenue and 102 street. He was driving on Jasper avenue, when he was struck by the locomotive. He was pulled out from the curb by the result that he landed on top of the safety zone cement abutment.

Australia also took the two opening singles matches Thursday clinching the round with the victory in the doubles.

Says Russian War
Is 15 Years Away

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. Aug. 8.—(CP)—The danger of war with Russia is 15 years away, says Mrs. Munro, recently returned European correspondent of the Canadian Press, said at an address here last night.

"You do not have to be long in the Soviet Union to see that the country is in no shape to wage a world war," Mrs. Munro said. "And she probably won't be for another 15 to 20 years. The Soviet Union, for all its bluster and boasting at Lake Success, at Paris and elsewhere, is a comparatively effete nation, despite its sprawling size and vast population."

"She has only potential strength for war. Her losses in the last year were so great it will take her years to make them up. Her railways are in terrible condition. She needs masses of rolling stock, Consumer goods of all kinds are greatly needed in the industry and agriculture is only catching her breath—a nation that can fight a war, a thriving war industry and agricultural reserves."

Paul Gallico

Says:

LONDON. — With trans-Atlantic travel again being resumed on a large scale, and dependent fresh from a crossing, it seems to me pertinent to reiterate back to a theme that is not exactly new and remind you that the human physiognomy, or just as never designed or intended by its Maker for public sleeping.

One has but to take a single turn around the Promenade Deck, or Fly-Catcher's Row, and note the assortment of living corpses, male and female, laid out in order by rows on deck chairs, their mouths open and their eyes shut, to wish for an early retirement from membership in the human race.

Sleep is a wonderful thing, and I am all for it, but it should be conducted strictly to private, particularly when the caricatures of human faces, thus exposed blanked out in slumber.

Rare Blood Flown City to Winnipeg

Five pints of a rare type of blood were flown on emergency call to Winnipeg Thursday, from the Red Cross blood transfusion service in Edmonton. It was announced today by Miss E. T. Huggins, provincial donor panel director.

The blood was the rare Rh-negative, type "B". Only 15 per cent of the population possesses Rh-negative blood, and most people are blood type "A" or "O" rather than "B". The Grace hospital in Winnipeg had combred the Winnipeg district for that type of blood, but was unable to locate any donated by the day's search. It is believed the blood was necessary in a maternity case.

On Thursday, Red Cross officials in Edmonton were telephoned about the urgent situation, and five pints of the blood were flown immediately to the Manitoba city by TCA.

Manitoba does not as yet have the blood and plasma transfusion service. Alberta and British Columbia are the only two provinces which have it.

Rhodesian Ridge-Back Pups "Lick Platter Clean" at Meal

Five, month-old Rhodesian ridge-back pups, believed to be the first of their type bred in Canada, were caught by the camera as they "licked the platter clean," on the lawn of their owner, Walter Crawford, 1180 122 street. Original South African lion hunters, "mama" and "papa" were brought out to Canada from Port Elizabeth last year by Mr. Crawford's son, Cyril who at that time was an engineer on the steamship neacut. Presently, as long as he is with them, Mr. Crawford claims "they are very good watchdogs." Their meals consist of dog food and canned milk. The parents were in quarantine last year but were released in September. The happy event—birth of the puppies—took place in Edmonton about one month ago. The ridge can be seen plainly on the backs of the pups.

LEGIONNAIRES

Congratulated for Program Edmonton Lions Club Entertains Easterners

The Edmonton Lions Club received many congratulations for the fine entertainment program offered the 85 Lions from Eastern Canada who paid a one-day visit to the city Friday.

Miss Denyse Chevalier, Sherbrooke, Quebec, who for the last three weeks has been travelling with the Lions members, received an honorary membership in the Edmonton Club and was named as its emissary of good will.

In a GAG initiation ceremony held during the dinner and entertainment at the Macdonald hotel last night "Miss Chevalier" did not qualify in any requirements of the Edmonton club, but was made an honorary member due to her cheerfulness.

The token, which usually is a bouquet of roses, turned out to be a live chicken. Many members declared though they did not intend to give Miss Chevalier the bird, on the contrary, A. G. Kristine stated, "We are very happy to have Miss Chevalier as a member of our club and we are all sure that she will do much to further good will between eastern and western Canada."

A convincing display of the eastern members' gratitude for the day's program provided by the Edmonton Club, was shown at the dinner, when $80 was collected from the visitors and given to the club as a token of appreciation and to further its program of good will.

Earlier in the day a tour of the Leduc sector of the Edmonton oil fields provided interesting entertainment. They were all eager to see the fields they had heard so much about and were very interested in all details of oil production.

The group left last night and will visit Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg and Fort William before arriving in Toronto.

A COSTLY BLUNDER

"HONESTLY, the Dunce causes almost as much trouble around here as Ginky, the mouse," wailed the Lady of Fashion. She wiped the tears from her eyes with her tiny handkerchief and glared at the Dunce.

"I-I-I didn't mean to do it," answered the crestfallen Dunce.

"That's just the trouble," sobbed the Lady of Fashion. "You never mean to do anything awful but you always do."

"I-I-I'm sorry," apologized the Dunce.

"Yes, you're always sorry, too. What you need to do is to think once in a while, but I suppose you are not able to do that. Oh, well, what's the use of arguing. I suppose you will keep right on doing foolish things," complained the little lady. She gathered up the half wound ball of yarn that had been knocked from her hand, stamped into the shoe house and threw herself onto her tiny bed for a good cry.

The Dunce had done a very foolish thing and he deserved everything the Lady of Fashion had said about him. For he had ruined enough spider web yarn to make all the sweaters and stockings of which the Teenie Weenies were so badly in need. Yarn is very hard to get because it has to be untangled from the spider's web, and that is a lot of work. Then it has to be dyed and processed to give it strength for knitting.

The Lady of Fashion had nagged for weeks before she could get the men to gather the web and then she and the other Teenie Weenie women had died it. It takes several days to process the web and then it had to be strung out to dry and wound into neat balls for knitting. Everything had been done but the drying and winding into balls. The little women had strung it around the stems of the rosebush which grows above the Teenie Weenie village. It had dried quickly in the warm sun and the women were winding it into yarn balls when the Dunce made one of his blunders.

He spied a big grasshopper and began chasing it around the village with a club. The women screamed for him to stop, for they were afraid the grasshopper would jump into the yarn. That's exactly what happened. The grasshopper flew right into the rosebush. Many strands of yarn were broken and the rest were so badly tangled they were a total loss.

Now the Dunce has to spend all his spare time gathering spider web to replace the lost yarn. He will have no time for fishing or other amusements until he has gathered as much web as was destroyed.
